FINANCIAL EDUCATION FOR KIDS: START WITH SAVING

In early childhood, the most important concept is the relationship between saving money and spending money—like the simple fact that you can't spend more than you have. Even a simple exercise like using a clear jar or fun piggy bank to save change can be a tangible way to teach what it means to "put something away for a rainy day."

It's important to make saving fun for younger children, and to get excited every time they add to their savings.

PLANNING FOR UPS AND DOWNS

Market volatility has the potential to erode your net worth. You can take steps now to help insulate your wealth against future market fluctuations.

Together, you and your financial advisor can reconstruct your portfolio to match your risk tolerance. Knowing your tolerance to risk, stage of life, and need for liquidity should shape your asset allocation so that you can tolerate volatility without triggering sudden, unplanned reactions. Developing a custom plan can help you manage emotion through all market environments.

Call Indiana Members Investment Services today to reorganize your assets to work toward your needs! It may help provide you confidence in periods of market volatility.
